October 7th, Sunny

I noticed a red car parked in front of Rendezvous Point with a sharply dressed man, leaning against his car. When I walked up to the stop, he looked at me with tearful eyes. He was waiting for someone with a jar of paper stars as his special person thought stars were signals from the heavens. I didn't find his devotion to be a waste of time as it was warm and infectious. "Even if I don't meet her today, I'll come back again in ten years."

Someone was interested in buying our family business. The business was in my hand, but I had dropped the card. Coincidentally, the same man picked up the card and was the person on the card. We went to a restaurant and he told me that he was interested in buying the business. I didn't want to sell the business and won't get tired of saying it. He wanted to help as the product reminded him of his past. Was meeting him a miracle or something else?

November 15th, Rain

I lost my family business to the man I mentioned in the journal. I have cried buckets as much as the rain. This man helped our business even with the refusal and I was happy. The business was doing well and I trusted him. It was foolish of me to believe someone by their word so quickly now that I'm writing about it. It just makes me sad that I was conned in this way and now he owns my family's business. I don't know who and what to believe now.

My friend had told me that he'd seen the man hum to me while petting me to sleep. I thought it was a dream, but it wasn't. My friend knew my feelings for the man and I denied this. He was a bastard who cheated me of my family business. It can't be true. My friend confessed his feelings for me as he understood my position, but he didn't say as he didn't want to lose our friendship. He was a good friend, but I couldn't recuperate his feelings.

January 7th, Rain

I am sitting at Rendezvous Point and I can't deny my feelings: I'm in love with him. I didn't think I would be fine with it. The man is complicated and hard to understand. It might not work, but I can't get away from it. Why is it that people can't be someone they want to be with? The man can't be with his special person; I wouldn't be able to be with him; My friend wouldn't be able to be with me. No matter what, I won't regret being with him.
